Question:

Which of the following is most strongly supported by the following premises?

Premise 1: All birds have feathers. Premise 2: Tweety is a bird.

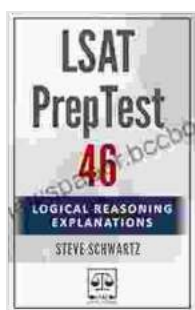

Explanation:

The correct answer is: Tweety has feathers.

The first premise establishes a universal relationship between birds and feathers, indicating that all birds possess feathers. The second premise specifies that Tweety is a bird. By combining these two premises, we can logically conclude that Tweety, being a bird, must also have feathers. This is the most strongly supported by the provided information.
