Housing

Dwarf hamsters need a cage that is at least 24 inches long by 12 inches wide by 12 inches high. The cage should have a solid bottom to prevent the hamster from digging out, and it should have plenty of ventilation. The cage should also include a hiding place, a wheel for exercise, and a food and water bowl.

You should clean your hamster's cage once a week. Remove all of the bedding and toys and wash them with hot soapy water. Rinse everything thoroughly and allow it to dry completely before putting it back in the cage.

Feeding

Dwarf hamsters are omnivores, which means that they eat both plants and animals. A good diet for a dwarf hamster includes a variety of fresh vegetables, fruits, and grains. You can also feed your hamster a commercial hamster food that is specifically designed for dwarf hamsters.

It is important to feed your hamster a balanced diet that includes all of the nutrients that it needs. A diet that is too high in fat or sugar can lead to health problems. You should also avoid feeding your hamster foods that are high in sodium, as this can lead to dehydration.

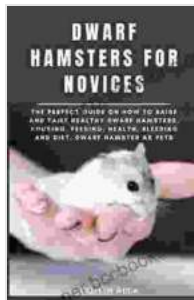

Health Care

Dwarf hamsters are generally healthy animals, but they can be susceptible to some common health problems, such as respiratory infections, diarrhea, and skin problems. It is important to take your hamster to the vet for regular checkups to ensure that it is healthy.

If you notice any signs of illness in your hamster, such as sneezing, coughing, diarrhea, or skin problems, you should take it to the vet as soon as possible. Early diagnosis and treatment can help to prevent serious health problems.
